Clay Fiscal Court, at instigation of H. H. Asher and J. F. Bosworth, appropriate funds for survey—Booster Meet for Road Held

LOCAL SENATOR TO PLANT
SHADE TREES TRAIL'S LENGTH

H. H. Asher, member of the state highway commission, and Senator J. F. Bosworth went before the fiscal court of Clay county at Manchester yesterday, and obtained an appropriation from them for the Bosworth Trail through that county. This was the last county on the proposed route to make the appropriation and their act assures the building of the trail.

The Bosworth Trail makes the distance between Middlesboro and Richmond ninety miles, whereas the distance by the Dixie Highway now is 125 miles. This is the only road planned thus far which goes through the region by Red Bird and on into Clay county. This, and the fact that every county on the route has now appropriated sufficient funds to make the survey asked by the state highway commission, makes the trail a certainty.

A large booster road meeting, attended by almost one thousand persons, was held at Manchester yesterday in the interest of the road. A road association to promote the Bosworth Trail was organized with W. M. Rawlins of Manchester as president and W. R. Reynolds of Jackson county as secretary, and with two directors from each county. Prof. J. J. DeWalt and Senator Rosworth are the directors from Bell county. Delegates attended from Richmond, Berea, Jackson county, Clay county and Bell county. The new association will meet again in Louisville next month when the big road meeting is to be held there.

Senator Rosworth is considering a plan, when the trail will have been entirely surveyed, of planting shade trees the ninety miles of the road between Middlesboro and Richmond. He will supply the trees himself.

When this road is completed, Senator Bosworth said, it will finish the state highway system for Bell county as mapped out by the 1920 Kentucky legislature, and Bell county will have the most complete system of roads of any county in the state.

The ordinance providing for the removal of garbage which passed the first reading two weeks ago passed the second reading last night and became a municipal law. It provides that owners of garbage shall place same in covered receptacles and shall have it hauled off at their own expense.

The hospital committee reported that a contract had been signed between the city and the officials of the Brosemer-Brunswick hospital in which the latter agreed for the sum of $750 to care for indigent patients and render necessary professional service during the year 1923.

The business of the city was disposed of in less than fifteen minutes. M. G. Hubbard presided in the absence of Mayor J. H. Keeney, who is out of town.

MRS. B. W. BAYLESS SPEAKS TO WOMEN

Tells of State Club Legislative Accomplishments Last Year—L. M. U. Scholarship Voted

Mrs. B. W. Bayless of Louisville was the speaker of the afternoon at the regular fortnightly meeting of the Woman's Club at the Booneway Inn yesterday. Mrs. Bayless is the fourth vice-president of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs, and is a candidate for president of that organization in the coming election. She is pleasantly remembered by a number of Middlesboro people as instructress in bandage making for the Red Cross here during the war.

Mrs. Bayless' talk, in her own words was "a ramble through legislative halls." She told of the efforts of the executive committee of the State Federation in Frankfort during the last session of the legislature, saying that they were largely instrumental in securing the passage of the social hygiene bill, and the bill securing the eligibility of women as members of the Board of Directors of the University of Kentucky, and in defeating such harmful legislation.

She said that women's clubs are reckoned as potent factors in legislation and for this reason should be exceedingly careful of the measures they endorse. Too often, she said, a club will be attracted by a single good clause and do much harm by lending their sanction to an otherwise worthless bill.

She urged the Middlesboro club carefully to read every bill sent them and to refer it to a committee to be studied exhaustively before endorsing it. Often it is wise, she said, to endorse a principle rather than a particular bill.

A musical program consisting of a violin duet, "Recessional," by Nevin, and Dick McCamy accompanied by Mrs. J. T. Alderson, and a vocal duet, "O That We Two Were A-May," by Mrs. T. R. Hill and Mrs. J. W. Charlton, also accompanied by Mrs. Alderson, added much to the enjoyment of the afternoon.

At the business meeting which preceded the program the Woman's Club voted one hundred dollars as a scholarship for one year to a girl in the freshmen class of Lincoln Memorial University.

Mrs. D. G. Hinks, president of the club, was in the chair; Mrs. A. B. Gloster, chairman of the music division, and Mrs. E. A. Hubbard, chairman of the educational division, were in charge of the program.

Father-Husband Triangle Leads To Two Deaths

By Gene Cohn
SAN FRANCISCO, FEB. 27.—The face of a girl that mirrored the likeness of her dead mother—

An "idyllic love triangle," completely void of all the usual triangular situations, as sordid sex and illicit companionships.

These are the elements of a strange tragedy in which Madeline Wrublesky, aged 16, finds herself the innocent cause.

Her husband, Alex Wrublesky, is dead—a suicide.

Her father, Harry L. Johnson, is dying—shot down by the husband.

And Madeline faces the world alone, a mere child in years and mind.

When five years ago, Madeline's mother died, the father found much compensation in the fact that the child bore a striking resemblance to the dead woman.

As Madeline grew older the likeness grew stronger.

Brought Back Mother

"It is almost as if she were in the house," Johnson would say to the child. He could not bear to think of the day when this "mirror" that seemed to bridge the years back to his happy married life would leave him.

But that day came!

A few months ago Madeline, a high school student, eloped with Wrublesky.

Secretly she feared the consequences.

The announcement has been received that Asheville University, the new college founded by Dr. George A. Hubbell, formerly of Lincoln Memorial University, is to be opened June 12, with an enrollment that will probably exceed 300 students. A faculty of more than twenty teachers has been drawn from Harvard, Johns-Hopkins, Vanderbilt and other great universities.

Dr. Hubbell went to Asheville, N. C. six months ago, soon after his resignation as president of Lincoln Memorial and enlisted the support of various local business and professional men in establishing a University. He found the time opportune to promote the project and from the first he met with hearty cooperation from the public.

In order to make Asheville University an accredited institution Dr. Hubbell has drawn his faculty from well known institutions of learning, and in every instance these teachers have not only graduated from leading institutions but have had years of experience as instructors. With this faculty Dr. Hubbell hopes to build up rapidly a college of extensive influence in western North Carolina and the South.

Among the members of the faculty are Dr. Robert B. Steele, professor of classical languages, now of Vanderbilt; Dr. Hubert D. Shaw, professor of chemistry, now teaching at Georgia Tech; Prof. Foss Smith, professor of physics and geology, formerly a professor in Lincoln Memorial; Miss Letitia Dillencourt, of Antioch College, teacher of English; Prof. Robert Al-

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Anthropologists said today the fossilized human skull, discovery of which was announced in the Associated Press Dispatches last night, may be the oldest human relic ever uncovered. If proven authentic, Dr. Franz Dörs of Columbia University, anthropologist and world famous scientist asserted it may be even older, possibly half a million years older, than the skull of Erret man ape found in Java twenty-nine years ago. It may even prove, he said, to be the skull of one of the earth's first men and throw light on existing of man in the Tertiary Period about which scientists have merely been able to speculate that in this period the earth assumed its present form and huge reptile beings were replaced by mammals. Then the glacial period was ushered in, from which the earliest known man dates.

The Christians were in the lead during the first half of the game but fell down in the last half. While the number of spectators was not large, the Sunday schools were fairly well represented. Much enthusiasm was aroused over the game.

The lineup of the Presbyterian team was as follows: P. W. McKinney and Neal Callison, forwards; Horace Lewis, center; George Schneider and Hugh Dean, guards. The Christian lineup follows: Harry Campbell and Prof. Leroy Lewis, forwards; Sam Marion and Jim Dean, guards; J. P. Scales, center; Ben Van Beber acted as referee for the game.

Judge Bosworth, speaking of the purchase in connection with the road that is to be built through this section of the state said today that, considering the improvements that Ford would make in this district, there was no end of the business possibilities to Middlesboro and Pineville with a road built through there, leading here.

A THOUGHT

Then said the Lord, Doest thou will to be angry?—Jon. 4:4.
 Anger begun with folly and ends with repentance.—Pythagoras.

MIDDLESBORO AUTO ACCIDENTS

With the coming of spring we may naturally expect an increase in the number of automobile accidents. Sunday, the first fair leisure day for several weeks, brought its toll of half a dozen or more of such occurrences. Without even knowing the details of these or other accidents we can always safely say that they were avoidable.

One of the men who was painfully bruised Sunday admitted that he was driving a car that he had owned only two or three days at a rate of forty miles an hour. Rapid driving, sharp curves and careless motorists are responsible for a majority of the accidents.

There is a sharp curve near Rose Hill where seventeen accidents, some of them serious, have occurred during the past two or three years. All automobilists who have a fair knowledge of the roads are aware of the curve yet many of them fail to properly check the speed of their cars; they take a gambler's chance and often lose.

All persons who drive cars know, or at least should know, the speed limit allowed by the state and by the city. These laws are violated every day and we never hear of any arrests resulting unless in case of accident or liquor transportation. Constables and deputies should be on the lookout for speed fiends in the rural districts for it is there that the drivers usually violate the speed laws.

Not all the accident are caused by the carelessness of the driver. There are many pedestrians who never think to look before crossing a road or street. In the crowded streets most sober drivers keep their cars well under control and accidents to pedestrians are not infrequently caused by their darting heedlessly in front of a car.

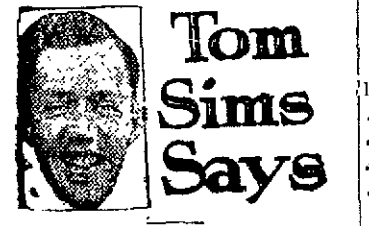

We believe that most drivers of automobiles are sane, careful men and women who take their time and never run unnecessary risks. But there is always that class of inconsiderate, thoughtless, speed-loving, death-defying motorists who leave in their wake benighted suffering and dying human beings and broken cars. These are the public enemies of the most sinister kind and should be dealt with like other criminals against society.

CONGESTION SPELLS PROSPERITY

Congestion of freight traffic in railroad yards here and in other cities indicates to railroad officials unparalleled business activity throughout the country. In Louisville, Ky., for instance temporary embargoes have been ordered to facilitate removal of cars, the Louisville and Nashville and the Kentucky and Indiana reporting record-breaking movements. The Courier-Journal recently printed a first page 4-column view of the congested condition of freight in the yards of the K and I. Normalcy has been a long time arriving, but is undoubtedly on hand now with the bells on heralding the return of prosperity. And the effect will be felt not only industrially and in the world of finance, but politically. This freight congestion also indicates a return to industrial peace, temporarily at least, and we hope for all time, if that is not too much to be hoped for all at one time. According to Vice President Coolidge, in a recent address, last year's industrial conflicts resulted in great losses for all persons immediately involved as well as for the millions concerned as consumers. The direct financial loss sustained by the participants in all of last year's labor controversies probably amounted to two billion dollars, the indirect losses being beyond computation. Estimating the country's net income at sixty billions, such mammoth strike debacles necessarily create a heavy burden in taxes and living expenses. In other words deliberately throwing away at least three per cent of the country's annual earnings.

And it should be remembered that the belligerents and disputants themselves bore much of the consequent loss and suffering, the department of labor placing the losses suffered by those who were immediately connected with the anthracite strike, both operators and miners, at a quarter of a billion. The bituminous losses in which our section were concerned, transportation controversy, resulted in even higher. Worse still, the loss to the railroads of $221,000,000 while the estimated loss in wages to employees is estimated at $177,000,000. It is indeed remarkable that in comparatively so short a time the country is recovering from such a staggering blow. But it may be well to ponder the situation presented—how quickly industrial stagnation follows conflicts between capital and labor and how quickly, with differences adjusted, the Old Ship of State will right herself and resume her voyage to Prosperity.—Journal and Tribune.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

The Twins started toward Jack Straw's palace in Mix-Up Land. They could see it plainly on the other side of a wide river. It was made of dominoes all over, like bricks, and the dominoes were black with little round, white spots on them. The chimney was made of dominoes and the doors and steps and walks and fences were dominoes so the place was as spotty as a cat's paw, or a finger-dilly, or a speckled hen, or a bad apple.

"We'll wish ourselves over the river in our Magic Shoes," said Nancy. "We had better start at once." "All right," said Nick, picking up the basket of eggs the Out-Out Lady had given him. So they said: "Oh, little Green Shoes. No time can we lose. Please give us a ride. To the stream's other side." And as usual the good little shoes lifted them up and started across the river, but the river began to grow wider and wider when they reached it.

It got so wide it looked like a sea and no land was in sight on either side. But one thing the Twins spied just before the land disappeared. It was Jack Straw standing on the bank, and turning the ring on his finger. "It's magic!" cried Nick. "That old Jack Straw won't let us get over. As long as he turns his ring the river will get wider and wider."

Suddenly Nancy thought of the basket of eggs. "Break one of the eggs, Nick!" she said quickly. "Or course!" declared Nick. "That's what they're for." So he reached in and got an egg and cracked it on the basket handle. Instantly a whole tripe of sand poured out and down into the river and filled it up.

Nancy and Nick came safely to the ground and started to walk toward Jack Straw's house again.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

The windows had been darkened. Only the slit of light visible from the bed-room was reflected in the glass of the door which closed after Kate with a foolish tinkle.

The sound jarred unpleasantly. It seemed out of place to Kate, incongruous, mocking, because below its silly jingle hung the limp insignia of Alice's end.

There was crepe on the door of Sing Loy's laundry. Some women passed as Kate stood for a second and looked at the fabric, caught with a spray of sunbax and moving slightly in the night breeze.

"I heard one of them Chinamen's wives is dead; they say she was a white girl, too."

Kate caught the words as the women passed. This, then, was to be the end of the little butterfly girl who dared defy life and death—"one of them Chinamen's wives." In death, Alice like the man at the morgue, was nameless so far as the rest of the world was concerned. No one knew, no one cared, whether their paths had run parallel courses.

Each had resolved to a bit of human clay with which the Potter had finished Latham was waiting at the curb in his car.

"What did you want of Sing Loy?" he asked as Kate seated herself. It was nearly midnight. The streets were quite deserted.

"I had a letter that I thought he should see," thoughtfully. "And then," she continued, after a pause, "when he came and I looked it over I felt that he shouldn't see it after all and I didn't read it to him."

"I have it here," she was still speaking slowly. She took the paper out of her purse and then replaced it. "I was going to let you see it," she said, "but I haven't the right. It belonged to Alice—it should have been buried with her."

"Now take me home—as fast as you can. I'm tired." Her tone was weary.

As she settled back in the car Kate found herself more worn out than she had known. The day had been a long and hard one, fraught with tragedy and mystery.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself. No other medicine has so large a sale.

A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kalm's Swamp Root. A preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitated to recommend for in almost every case it shows excellent results. It is one of my customers' testifies. No other medicine has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation the success of Dr. Kalm's Swamp Root is due to the fact so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles, and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a simple bottle of Swamp Root by enclosing Post Address Dr. Kalm & Co. Binghamton N. Y., and enclosing ten cents. Also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.

Cover the fish with a sauce consisting of two cups of milk, a fourth of a cup each of butter and flour, a quartet of a teaspoon of salt and an eighth teaspoon of pepper.

Wash, pare and halve six potatoes; place the halves around the fish and bake all for 10 minutes, or until the potatoes are soft. Baste with the sauce around the fish several times during cooking.

Sprinkle with two tablespoon of chopped parsley and serve at once.

FLOUNDER SHRIMP SAUCE

By Bertha E. Shapleigh

To prepare steam fillets of flounder, or sole with shrimp sauce, you will need:

Six fillets, a can of shrimps, or a pint of the same shellfish, fresh, three tablespoons each of butter and flour, a cup of fish stock, made by cooking fish bones in water, half a cup of cream or top milk, half a teaspoon salt, a teaspoon and a half of paprika, a tablespoon each of minced onion and brown rice and three pieces of toast cut into pointed triangles.

Place fillets in a pan, season with salt and pepper and steam 10 minutes, or longer, if the fish will not flake easily.

Melt butter and onion and cook five minutes with stirring, add flour, salt and paprika and fish stock. Cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly, then add cream and shrimps and heat to boiling point.

Add lemon juice and more seasoning, if necessary. Place fish fillets on platter, pour over them the sauce, and garnish with toast points.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

RED PEPPER HEAT STOPS BACKACHE

The heat of red peppers takes the "ouch" from a sore, lame back. It can not hurt you, and it certainly ends the torture at once.

When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try Red Pepper Rub, and you will have the quickest relief known. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers.

Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you will feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Pain and soreness are gone.

Ask any druggist for a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Be sure to get the genuine, with the name Rowles on each package.

F. S. Lee Tells Advantages Of Cumberland Gap as Park Site

By F. S. LEE, Engineer
I have been asked to write an article enumerating the various advantages that the region around Cumberland Gap and Middleboro has to offer for the establishment of a National Park, and the reciprocal advantages that such a park would have for the section named.

First and foremost is the Cumberland Mountain ridge of the Appalachian range, which, in the area of the proposed park, has an altitude of 2,000 feet to something over 3,000 feet elevation above sea level, and, with but few exceptions, the highest altitudes in the state of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee. The geologist Loomis says, "Mountains are the glory of our earth, the culminating points of its scenic grandeur and beauty." This quotation applies fittingly to the Cumberland Mountains; the proposed park area. They are the glory of the State of Kentucky, and the culminating points of its scenic grandeur and beauty.

I spent my boyhood in the Alleghenies of northern Pennsylvania close to the southern border of the State of New York. I have clambered over the Pocono Mountains of eastern Pennsylvania and northern New Jersey, climbed the steep slopes of the Rocky Mountains in western Montana, and across Idaho and Colorado, spent many a summer and winter day on the high passes and peaks of the Cascades in the States of Washington and Oregon, and have used for guide marks Mount Rainier in Washington and Mount Hood in Oregon, and the and the conspicuous peaks of the Rocky Mountains in Idaho, while engaged in engineering work on irrigation canals in the Yakima Valley of eastern Washington.

Other Mountain Scenery
Many nights have I slept on a blanket spread on the ground and with a saddle for a pillow, on the banks of a river in the heart of the Sierra Madre mountains in the State of Tamaulipas, Mexico, when in the employ of the Monterey and Mexican Gulf Railroad, and while on an expedition with three others after supposed buried treasure of a tribe of Aztecs who fled from the City of Mexico when Cortez captured that City; have hunted and prospected for minerals in the highest mountains of West Virginia and Maryland, and the Blue Ridge of Virginia, Tennessee, and Georgia; have gone across the mountains of Porto Rico and the island of Cuba; have ridden horse-back over some of the highest passes in the Andes Mountains of Venezuela, South America, and have climbed up and slid down the sides of, and camped in the dense tropical growth on the banks of the rivers in those mountains while making reconnaissance surveys for railroads and examining the mineral deposits, have stood on the peaks of the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas, and have traveled along nearly every ridge of the Cumberland Mountains in the proposed park area so it can be said that I know something about mountains, and when I say that the mountain scenery of the proposed park is equal to any and surpassed by none that I have seen in my travels I am speaking from actual experience, and not from hearsay.

View From the Pinnacle
Standing on the Pinnacle and looking towards the fertile Powell's Valley is spread out to the view with its farmhouses and villages. This valley is bordered by Waldens Ridge, and beyond that are the serrated ranges and ridges of mountains that extend to where the horizon and mountains meet and blend. The view to the South is of the same nature and extent, while to the West the shimmering ribbon of Fern Lake and the city of Middleboro are seen encompassed by mountains. To the North, Pine Mountain and the mountain ridges beyond for miles are outlined with crystal clearness. The flowers, trees, shrubs and plants are a mingling of the flora of the North and the South, and are bewildering in their number and varieties. No complete collection of such has as yet been made by any botanist.

There is an ever changing appearance of the mountain side befitting the different seasons of the year. To winter the bare branches of the deciduous trees are relieved here and there by clumps of evergreens, and the steeply inclined ledges of rock stand out prominent and grim like battlements ready to meet and vanquish any foe. In spring all these cliffs and ledges disappear from view, hidden by the leaves of the trees, which condition continues until the frosts of autumn change the green leaves into a mantle of colors of continued on page 19..... brown, red, yellow and combinations of those colors, that only the paint brushes of nature know how to spread.

Wonders of King Solomon's Cave
King Solomon's Cave in the limestone of Pinnacle Mountain has never been fully explored. In the early days of Middleboro it was electrically lighted for some distance, and this could be done again, and who knows what marvels may be disclosed when its miles of passages are made accessible to the tourist. Soldier's Cave, but a short distance from King Solomon's Cave, is noted for its saltpetre deposits which were utilized during the Civil War for making gunpowder.

The remains of the trenches and fortifications made and used during the Civil War to guard the very important pass of Cumberland Gap are still observable for several miles on both sides of the mountain at the gap. Relics of that conflict have been gathered in profusion in and near the trenches and forts, and many may still be found by the diligent searcher.

The climate is well adapted for all the year round camping, and tourists will find this park an ideal place to spend their vacation periods, no matter what time of the year they occur. Doubtless such camp sites will be available either in the park or along its outskirts.

Historic Associations of Site
This park will be accessible, in a year or two, over the best of hard surfaced roads. Only a few short connecting links of this highway in Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee are not yet completed and work is progressing on all of them. The park site is already served by the Southern and Louisville and Nashville railroads, which enter Middleboro and the town of Cumberland Gap through a tunnel under Cumberland Gap and part of the proposed park.

The park would be forested where needed and this would be a source of constant income to the government through the sale of timber grown on it, cut and regrown, and would also furnish timber for woodworking plants in this city and vicinity.

The historic associations which cluster around this park site are among the most noted in the United States. Cumberland Gap was a well traveled pass for buffalo and other wild animals long before the coming of the white men. The Indians used this pass also on their hunting and predatory expeditions. This pass was one of the first in the Alleghenies to be discovered and used by the early hunters and settlers. Such use continued until the railroads displaced it. It was of great strategic value in the Civil War and played an important part in the struggle.

This park would bring thousands of tourists from all parts of the world who would remain here for varying lengths of time throughout the year and would be a constant source of income to the merchants of its vicinity.

There is no doubt that many who came here as tourists would become interested financially in the wood working plants, coal and iron mines, limestone quarries, cement mills and glass factories and iron works that are already here of that are merely awaiting the necessary capital to be started. Others would want to reside here on account of the delightful, beautiful scenery and healthful location.

STEAKS

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
Probably most housekeepers, asked to name the meat most enjoyed by their families, would answer "steak."

This is due partly to the ease with which steak is prepared, partly to the fact that most people, especially men, do not care for "made" dishes.

Menu cards list various kinds of steaks, such as sirloin and tenderloin, presumably thick, to be broiled over coals, gas or charcoal, or parboiled. Then, one sees "minute steak," very thin, so as to broil "medium" in a minute.

Sauce is not necessary, but many people enjoy one, made with fresh or canned mushrooms.

Onions no longer are considered plebeian, and what is better than a steak so smothered, or covered with them fried?

If a steak is thick—that is, two or more inches—it should be carved in thin slices, several being served to each person, a much better method than giving each a large piece to be cut on the plate.
